temperature is 82.

Alfred Noyes, who has achieved th reputation of being the only builder of the lofty rhyme who has steadily made a living at it, arrived yesterday by the Cunarder Carmania, with his American wife, daughter of the late Col. G. B Daniels of the United States army.

The poet is not like the regulation

Maybe this is due to the fact that he turns out a volume of verse every year, or nearly so. Mr. Noyes is only 32 and looks no older. He declared that he was not entirely sedentary yet, not having been able altogether to get over a tendency to open air exercise, which he used to enjoy when he an oar in his college eight at Oxford.

Mr. Noyes is here to lecture, chiefly on literary themes. He will talk also on militarism. That will be the subject of his first lecture here. He is in world peace and arbitration, He is in favor written poems about both. He admitted that he made a living out of his vers and surmised that other poets might do it also if they tried hard enough. He intends to lecture twice a day of literary subjects, beginning to-morrow a luncheon given by the Poets Socie at Sherry's. He will also talk at C lumbia University and later have audi nces in New England and middle West-

THE LICHTENAUER PICTURES ON VIEW

Collection Mostly the Work of Well Known American Artists.

WILL BE SOLD AT AUCTION

As Will the Great Collection of Chinese Treasures of Prince Kung.

Sharing the American Art Gallerie ust now with the great collection of Prince Kung, comprising ancient Chinese bronzes, paintings on silk, jades porcelains and the like, is the assortment of paintings brought together by the late J. Mortimer Lichtenauer of this city, embracing the work of American artists and also of a few foreigners. Both collections are being shown prior to their dispersal at auction, the Lichtenauer pictures being set for sale at the galleries on Thursday evening and at the Plaza Friday evening.

The Orientalia from the Pekin palace of Prince Kung, brought to this country by Yamanaka & Co. will be sold at the galleries on Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons of this week.

As to the Chinese treasures, comment has already appeared in this newspaper. The Lichtenauer pictures, including by Edward Howard Briggs on "Philoso-numerous examples of the work of the phy of Browning," Berkeley Theatre, collector's son and namesake, who is well 11 A. M. The Lichtenauer pictures, including known as a mural decorator in this city. are not important in the large commercial sense, but they make a pleasant impression. Many of them were bought wenty or more years ago, if one may judge by the dates and by the manner and quality of the men represented You find here, for instance, examples of artists who no longer figure often in current sales, yet who have honorable places in American art.

Such are the specimens of the honest likable work of the late Benjamin R. Fitz, such again is a landscape by the ate William Bliss Baker, and there is nothing better perhaps in the whole collection than one of the landscapes igned by the late Theodore Robinson and dated 1885.

Richard Pauli, who died as long ago as 1892, figures several times, and it is pleasant to be reminded of his not very powerful yet usually sympathetic way of presenting the beauty of landscape, of trees that overhang watersides, of skies that reflect happy blues and lucent grays. And here are Wyant and Inness, seen in not very large but decidedly characteristic examples of their personal and enduring art. Wyant's "Study of Twilight," from the executor's sale of his effects in 1894, is well worth seeing again, while some of the early phases of Innes's art, as here exemplified, can but increase the loving esteem in which the profuse genius of Montclair is held. A sketch by Twachtman more substantial than his later work, may also be mentioned with these records of artists that have passed on. Childe Hassam is found in the Lich tenauer's collection in atractive mood

Melcher's art. in the phases of twenty or more years back, contributes its share to the ensemble. Carroll Beckwith is seen to better advantage, so far as quality of paint goes, than in his more recent work, and the same may be said still more emphatically of Kenyon Cox, whose study for the head of a woman in his Bowdoin College decoration, dated 1893, has the vigor, the full blooded quality, that one misses from
